

Dissertation AbstractWilliam Brasic

My research answers questions in health economics, artificial intelligence, and antitrust and competition policy. My job market paper examines how flavored e-cigarette regulations affect addiction and consumer behavior through a dynamic structural model. I also use economic theory and reinforcement learning to study the competitive effects of pricing algorithms and recommendation systems, an area of growing antitrust enforcement interest.