Dear Cori,

Eller Community and Networking

Most working professionals pursue their MBA for one of four reasons: 1) advancement in their current role, 2) advancement in their current area, 3) advancement with their company in a different area, or 4) career change outside of their current company.

You have taken a great first step in starting your MBA with the Eller College of Management. The Eller Community includes over 600 graduate students. In a few years you will join the even larger Eller Alumni Community. Now is the time to take advantage of this vast and growing network. Starting at Launch you will have many opportunities to network with classmates, current students, faculty, staff, and more.

As working professionals you all know the benefits of networking including making new connections, raising your business profile, learning about opportunities, professional guidance, building your professional brand and so on. Even if you are not currently looking for new employment, building those relationships now can greatly impact your future. You never know when someone can become a potential employer, colleague, reference, friend, etc. The journey through a program like this one can quickly change your outlook on your own professional growth and no matter what you plan to do with your degree, you will find yourself wanting to leverage your new skills and accomplishments. Keep this in mind as you face opportunities to build your community and weigh them against the time challenges you'll be facing – it will, at times, be a difficult decision to make yourself available to take advantage of opportunities to grow and network.

PMBASA

The University of Arizona Professional MBA Student Association (PMBASA) is a student-run club with a mission to communicate, foster, and empower unity through the development of professional skills and the promotion of student relationships. Association representatives are nominated from each active Evening MBA, Executive MBA and Online MBA program cohorts, with involvement from Eller MBA Administration.

Goals:

- Fostering communication between the students, staff, and administration
- Voicing collective ideas and putting these ideas into action
- Promoting career and professional development opportunities
- Cultivating student involvement
- Celebrating the achievements of our diverse student body
- Building school spirit

During Launch, you will meet current representatives of the PMBASA. By the end of

- Financial Aid (FAFSA)
- Driver Registration

SENT EMAIL COMMUNICATIONS

- Action Items
- Program Important Dates
- Career Management

Launch, we will request that you nominate three members from your cohort to represent you. Serving on the PMBASA will give you first hand exposure to cohort representatives, staff, and alumni.

MBA Career Management

Many of our MBA students change positions during, or soon after, completing their degree. Eller MBA provides valuable career development resources. Remember to update your résumé and submit it by Aug 1st. For more information on how Career Management can assist you, contact your EvMBA Team.

Your Journey

This adventure is yours. You will get out of it what you put in. You should be feeling excited about your path ahead. Although it will not be easy and it requires commitment, you'll have the support of your classmates and our MBA Team who will partner with you for your success. Take it all in, enjoy the learning and maximize your growth with full engagement. Good luck on your journey!

Sincerely,

Your Evening MBA Team
